MAYORS'

ECONOMIC FORECAST

RESET 2010: The Road to Recovery

How will the Bay Area economy fare in 2010? Are we on the road to recovery? Join us for a fascinating view from the top, as San Francisco Mayor Gavin Newsom and Oakland Mayor Ron Dellums discuss the future of their cities and the region. How will each city emerge from the recession? What is the impact of stimulus investments, health care reform, tight credit markets, strong global ties and other swirling economic forces? Each Mayor is grappling with massive budget deficits, the impact of a broken state economy, and high unemployment – yet the fundamentals are strong in each city. What will drive economic growth, future real estate development, and the jobs of the future as these dynamic cities reinvent themselves out of the ashes of the great recession?

As always, the opening act for the Mayors' Summit will be an enlightening financial forecast and regional commercial real estate forecast. Don't miss this annual "must attend" opportunity to get up close and personal in a lively discussion with the leaders of these two dynamic cities at the heart of the Bay Area.
